About AMITA

Founded in 1899, the Association of MIT Alumnae is dedicated to providing a means for former women students to maintain contact with each other and MIT.

We also support current women students at MIT with our various on-campus activities, giving them a chance to interact and form relationships with alumnae.

We hold a variety of events to provide alumnae with an opportunity to stay in touch and to stay informed about issues and developments that are relevant to their lives.

Did you know?

- Membership is open to any woman who has completed one semester of study at MIT.
- Dues support programs for MIT’s women students and other AMITA activities.
- AMITA established a professorship for tenured women in honor of Ellen Swallow Richards (ESR), the Institute's first alumna (1873). A chemist, she taught MIT students for 35+ years and spent her life pursuing the importance of clean water, pure food, and bringing science to women.
- Seven tenured professors have been brought to the faculty through the five-year ESR chair.
- AMITA provides scholarship and student support funds for undergraduate women.
- The Margaret MacVicar Memorial AMITA Oral History Project documents the rich and diverse experiences of women who attended MIT. Transcripts are available in the MIT Archives.
